The congregation secretary may print a hard copy application for anyone who requests one. Afterwards, the applicant will fill in the application by hand. Alternatively, the secretary may send an electronic copy to the applicant's personal e-mail address so that he may fill in the application electronically. However, for security reasons the applicant should not return the completed electronic application to the secretary by means of a personal e-mail address such as yahoo.com, gmail.com, or some other personal e-mail service provider. He should either print a hardcopy of the completed application or if he has a portable storage device that will allow him to securely transfer the electronic file to the secretary he may do so. On the other hand, if the applicant is an appointed servant and has access to the electronic forms section of the jw.org website he may forward the completed application to his congregation secretary by means of his personal jw.org inbox so that it may be securely received by the body of elders.

Whichever of the abovementioned secure methods is chosen the applicant will return the application to the secretary so that the Congregation Service Committee may electronically complete page four. If the applicant has provided a hard copy, the congregation secretary will transfer the answers from the hard copy application directly to the electronic application. The congregation secretary will then send the completed electronic application, along with a separate digital photograph in the usual passport-type format as an attachment, directly to the circuit overseer by means of the jw.org Inbox feature.
